

SerVICES in the Churches of Washington

In times of moral shadows such as these, it is better to be a truthful pessimist than an optimistic liar. It is better to be an honest policeman ringing the loud alarm at midnight, than the lazy watchman who cries: "Twelve o'clock and all is well," when the foundations of the Republic are trembling. The morals of these wide waves of crime, of selfishness, of moral degeneracy in our growing youth, is a mortal challenge to the courage, effectiveness, and existence of the law and the Gospel.

—Col. John Temple Graves.

Why I Believe in Church Advertising.
1. Because it definitely locates a church for the stranger, the newcomer, the occasional attendant. By looking at his Saturday paper, one can find where the church which meets his denominational requirements, or his religious whims, is located.
2. Because it places the church in the class where it belongs, the class of the producers of things people need in life.
3. Because it puts the church, its minister and its people on their mettle to produce and dispense just what they claim they have, in the most attractive, sincere, earnest and compelling way possible.
4. Because it reaches with the message of truth some who have pastoral preaching and calling and church activities do not, and in some cases, cannot reach. Not all people can come to church. This makes good advertising on the part of the church especially essential.

"The Work of the Church in the Great Business of Building the Highest Character."
"Like every other business, this business of the church should be adequately advertised. This advertisement, however, should not be a species of camouflage. It should set forth the real work of the church in a dignified and impressive way. It is through the right kind of advertising that the church will impress the public with the fact that it is really doing something worth while. Most churches today are wide awake. They have a big program. The nonchurch public should know the social value of the church and be acquainted with the service it is rendering to the community."

The Vermont Avenue Christian Church

(The Garfield Memorial Church)
Vermont Avenue and N Street Northwest.

The Vermont Avenue Christian Church is the pioneer congregation of the Disciples of Christ in Washington. It dates back to 1843, when an organization was effected by Dr. J. T. Barclay, who afterwards became the first foreign missionary of the Disciples. Meetings were first held in private homes; later in halls.
In 1869 the congregation purchased from the Methodist Episcopal Church South, a little frame chapel on M street near Ninth street northwest. This was afterwards moved to the site of the present church building.
The election of President Garfield, who was a faithful attendant at the modest little chapel, gave rise to a movement to provide a more worthy building. Funds were collected throughout the country for the erection of the present edifice. The church was dedicated January 20, 1884, as a memorial to the martyred President. Mr. Garfield did not survive to attend the dedication.
The pastor for thirty-three years, beginning in 1875, was Dr. Frederick D. Power, who was well known and beloved, both locally and nationally. The remarkable growth and development which marked his pastorate have continued during the eleven years' ministry of his successor, Dr. Earle Willey, the present pastor.

The congregation has grown into a group of fifteen churches in and near Washington, with a membership of 5,000. The Vermont Avenue offspring includes the following Christian churches: Ninth Street, H Street, Park View, Fifteenth Street, Columbia Heights, the R Street colored congregation, and suburban congregations at Mount Rainier, Capitol Heights, Suitland, Tuxedo, Maryland Park, Landover, Ballston and Vienna.
The Vermont Avenue Church building is too small for its present congregation. An adjoining residence was bought some years ago and has since been remodeled for Sunday School and other purposes.

A movement has been begun for the erection of a new building which will afford sufficient space and equipment for the activities of the congregation. A proposal has been approved by the international convention of the Disciples of Christ for making this building a national representative church of that body.
